the case of Missouri, the question of a necessity existing for her doing as the ordinance proposes, is at least debatable, and where the necessity does not exist, oppressive taxation is not justified.

Such a system is liable to encourage corruption and extravagance in the executive officers of a State, while it leaves the property-holding minority at the mercy of the non-property-holding minority at the mercy of the States are in an unsatisfactory condition, their aggregate indebtedness having been immensely increased during the rebellion; and there is no doubt that there will be considerable agitation in and out of Congress in favor of the assumption of the war debts of the several States by the general government. But it is to be hoped that no such extreme measures as those proposed in the Missouri ordinance will be adopted to get rid of fiscal embarrassments. A huge debt like that referred to cannot be so expeditiously cancelled by legitimate means, and Missouri will find it to her inter at to be a little more conservative in her financial administration than the proservative in her financial administration than the proceedings of the late convention would indicate.

In reference to American stocks Satterthwaite's London circular says:—
The activity we have lately noticed in the London market for American securities not only continues, but increases, the belief becoming strenger that the end of the war approaches, and that, in prospect of peace, the present sterling price of the stock is lower. United States five-twenty bonds have steadily advanced, closing two per cent above the quotations of this day week. The mail of Monday bringing reduced quotations for railroad shares from New York, and some consignments, the prices of Illinois and Erie gave way $2 a. $3 per share; but a steady demand soon cleared off importations, and the market at the close is very strong for both, and there being buyers of large lines of Illinois at 61, and of Eric at 33½. Atlantic and Great Western debentures are steady at 87 a 89, with daily transactions between these limits.

The Cotton in the Rebel States A FRENCH ESTIMATE OF THE SUPPLY IN THE CON

A FRENCH ESTIMATE OF THE SUPPLY IN THE CONFEDERACY.

[From the Manchester Guardian, March 31.]
The following circular has been handed to us, with a request for its publication:—
One of the causes of the present panic in the cotton market and the extraordinary decline in prices is certainly the appelension of an early termination of the American war, and the consequent immediate heavy rereipts of cotton from the Confederate States.
The following estimate of the probable stock in the Southern States, compiled by one who has been in unanterrupted communication with the confederacy, and who has taken extraordinary pains to obtain correct information on the subject, may, therefore, be of interest at the present moment.

sendings of the last three months of 1864 were very large, but of that we shall have no correct estimate until late on.

The total of 1,550,000 bales is easily got at from the quantity received in Europe and the consumption in the Northern States.

The quantity consumed in the confederacy is the most difficult to estimate, still we have several leading points to guide us. Frat, there were several mills in the Southern States before the war. W. P. Wright's circulars, for the last two years before the war, put down their consumption at about 200,000 bales for each year. It is well known that, besides, many planters had hand looms making coarse goods for negro clothing. This, however, was not general, but since the war it has become so, and all those who were engaged in blockade running can testify to the high price spand for cotton cards in 1862-63. The first year's consumption could not have been extensive, as there was an old stock of goods in the country; but since, not only clothing, but ropes and even shoes have been made of cotton. Wooden blankets were given to soldlers and replaced by cotton counterpanes. Cotton, in fact, was used for every purpose. There are no other textile products, no hemp, no flax, and very little wool gathered in the South. Taking into consideration also the destruction by carelessness of the waste of handlooms, I think I am right in estimating the total consumption in the South at 2,000,000 bales. Indeed, I have seen it stated that in some places far removed from frontiers, cotton had become so valueless as to have been mosd by to onfederate cavalry as litter for their horses.

The quantity destroyed by fire has been estimated at 1,000,000. I am inclined to think this an exaggeration, and I think 730,000 bales a more correct estimate.

My figures thus would be:—

Creps. 1861-62 1862-63 1863-64	1,000,000.	Southern msumption. 500,000. 750,000. 750,000.	Total Outgoings. 500,000. 525,000. 525,000.	u ed and consumed. . 1,000,000 . 1,275,000 . 1,275,000
Destroyed	5,000,000 by fire	2,000,000	1,550,000	3,550,000 750,000
Remaining	orbed on 1st Sept	ember, 1864		4,300,000 700,000 550,000
On hand for Outgoing a of 1864	or this camp nd consump	aigntion of last	three mont	1,250,000 he 450,000 the stock existing there for the use of the mills in the vicinity would be fired immediately.

I see very little prospect of any supplies of cotton coming from America, in any case, at present, until after September, 1865, if peace should be concluded next

Will you allow me the use of a small space in yo columns to expose the injustice done to government employes in collecting the revenue tax. The law reads comes over $600, and deducts from the excess of $600 the house rent the party may pay; but the officials ignore the law altogether, and collect five per cent on all amounts received over $2 per diem. For instance:—A mechanic in the employ of the government (in the Navy mechanic in the employ of the government (in the Navy Yaru) worked for only six days in the month of February, at $3 50 per day; his pay is $21; he paid a tax on $9, which is 45 cents.

Again:—A mechanic in private employ, receiving $3 50 per day for three hundred days is $1,050, and pays a $250 rent, only pays a tax on $200; while a mechanic in government employ, at $3 per day, and, through causes, only works two hundred days, and, in fact, only receives just $600, yet he pays a tax on $200 as well. Is this the meaning of the law?

The above is a true statement, and, while we are governed by the same haws as the mechanic in private employ, are we not entitled to the same benefits?

indictment against Peter Heffernan alias James Johnson, seen, has brought the career of one of the most noted shoplifters in New York to an end for the present. The conviction of this individual, who has heretolore and repeatedly succeeded in cluding even the vigilance of the prosecuting officers of the county, is mainly owing to the exertions and skill of District Attorney Hall. It appears that on several occasions, when arrested and just been found guilty, he "jumped" his bail, and when he had absented himself a sufficient length of time to prevent the necessary witnesses for the people ap-pearing against him, would return to the city and resume his nefarious operations. That was the fact in this particular indictment; and it may not be out of place to state that the agent of the watch company who owned the watches stolen by Heffernan and place to state that the agent of the watch company who owned the watches stolen by Heffernan and his wife (who always accompanied him on his foraging expeditions) retired from business and returned to Switzerland. The District Attorney, however, learning that the clerks of the agent, who were in his employ at the time the their was committed, were in the city, found that their testimony would be sufficient to prove the case for the people, and accordingly he procured the arrest of Heffernan and placed the indictment on the calendar for trial. The counsel for the prisoner made sity muons efforts to have the case postponed on Wednesday, but Mr. Hali missted on the trial proceeding. Recorder Hoffman consented to have a put over till the next day, with the understanding that it should be positively tried. The Bustrict Attorney moved to have the defendant committed, aithough he admitted that his ball (which was in the sum of five thousand dollars) was very good, alleging as a reason that as Hefferman ran away once before, he might do the same thing again. "A bird in the hand was worth two in the bush." Counsel for the prisoner opposed the motion, but the Recorder, after deliberating for a few moments, decided that the ends of public justice required that Mr. Hefferman's appearance in court the next morning should be rendered certain, and so order d him to be locked up. It is well known to the authorities that Hefferman, in conjunction with his wife, has been operating in most of the jewelry establishments in New York for a series of years, and that he has amassed a respectable fortune. Some, who possess opportunities for acquiring informat on on these matters, hinted that he was worth forty thousand dollars, while others gave the opinion that half that amount would be nearer the triath. It is certain, however, that he has acquired considerable property by purfoling jewelry.

The Growing Grain.—The prospect for an abundant wheat crop in this valley was probably never more promising at this season of the year than now. The grain fields, with but few exceptions, look green and beautiful, and so rapid has been its growth under the favorable weather of the winter and spring that we hear of farmers pasturing some of their fields to prevent it from becoming too rank and lodging. The fruit crops also bid fair for a large yield.—Middleown (Md.) Registr.
